ABSTRACT

As part of a forthcoming report entitled "The Education of Urban Indian Children in the United States," this document is a selective summary of 1968 data from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare concerning racial/ethnic breakdowns of public school students in standard metropolitan statistical areas (SMSA's). Data for the overall survey were reported to the Office for Civil Rights by school district superintendents and/or state education agencies. All school districts with 3,000 or more enrollment (1967-68) were surveyed. Smaller school districts were selected for inclusion in the survey in a statistically random manner based on district enrollment. This report provides information on urban American Indian student demography in 169 SMSA's in the United States (including the District of Columbia). Statistical charts showing the state, school district, and number of schools in the district, number of Indian students and teachers, and other pertinent information make up the major portion of the report. Introduction

This report, a selective analysis of 1968 ethnic student data gathered by the Office for Civil Rights, is designed to provide students of American Indian demographics and urban education with an up-dated picture of urban Indian student numbers, proportions, and distribution by districts. Before commencing with this analysis, it would be proper to refer to the HEW report (Directory of Public Elementary and Secondary Schools in Selected Districts: Enrollment and Staff by Racial/Ethnic Group) for an overview of the reasons for the survey and a discussion of its methodology:

> The Office for Civil Rights (OCR) is responsible for administering Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act as it applies to programs funded by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Title VI prohibits discrimination because of race, color or national origin in any program or activity that receives Federal financial assistance. In partial fulfillment of this responsibility periodic racial/ethnic surveys of public elementary and secondary schools are conducted as authorized in regulations implementing Title VI.
> Results of the first national racial/ethnic survey of public schools (in the fall of 1967) were published by the Office of Education, National Center for Educational Statistics and entitled Directory of Public Schools in Large Districts With Enrollment and Staff, by Race -- Fall, 1967.
> A second national survey was conducted in the fall of 1968 and was based on an enlarged sample of public elementary and secondary school districts and schools. The number of minority racial/ethnic categories was expanded in the fall, 1968 survey to include American Indian, Oriental, and Spanish Surnamed Americans as well as Negroes. White non-minority and undesignated minority groups are included in the column headed "other". The Social Research Group of the George Washington University, under contract with and at the direction of the Office for Civil Rights, conducted the fall, 1968 survey.
> The Office for Civil Rights is appreciative of the considerable time and effort expended by the state and local school officials who participated in the survey.

Survey Description and Source of Data

This directory contains reported information, as of the beginning of the 1968-1969 school year, on the racial/ethnic composition of pupils and full-time classroom teachers (assigned to one school) in approximately 8,500 school districts in the continental United States including Alaska and the District of Columbia. These data were reported to the Office for Civil Rights by school district superintendents and/or State education agencies. The reports were required under the regulations implementing Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Hawaii and the Territories were not required to participate in this survey. Ninety-five school districts with Federal funds terminated (as of August, 1968) because of non-compliance with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 were also excluded from the survey.

All school districts with 3,000 or more enrollment (1967-1968) were surveyed. Smaller school districts were selected for inclusion in the survey in a statistically random manner based on district enrollment size in the preceding school year (1967-1968) as determined by the United States Bureau of the Census (1967 Census of Governments, Volume I).

The sampling plan used was as follows:

District Enrollment	Sampling Rate	Projected Total In Each Size Category
3,000 and larger	100%	actual data
1,200 - 2,999	75%	1 1/3 times actual data
600 - 1,199	50%	2 times actual data
300 - 599	25%	4 times actual data
less than 300	0	none

In addition to the above sampled districts, all districts eliminating racially dual school systems under terms of voluntary plan agreements with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare or under Federal court order were surveyed regardless of school district enrollment size. Districts, in these categories, with total enrollments of less than 300 are reported separately in Appendix B.

Several variations in reporting methods were used to provide information for the survey. Most school districts reported data directly to HEW by completing the school and school district report forms. Samples of the standard report forms are reproduced in Appendix A. Six states -- Michigan, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Washington, Wisconsin, and several city school districts -- sent punched cards or computer tapes containing similar data already available in their files. These six states elected to submit data for all districts in their states and the surveyed and projected data for these states are identical. Data for some court order districts were derived from special forms previously filed with the courts.

Survey Universe

The 8,491 school districts sampled covered an estimated 43.9% of the nation's public school districts but they enrolled an estimated 90.8% of the nation's public elementary and secondary pupils.

The survey data are representative of a larger universe of 11,496 districts -- the estimated total number of districts enrolling 300 or more students. This includes an estimated 96.8% of the nation's public elementary and secondary pupil enrollment.

Table I and II, show actual and projected survey enrollment data, by state. Table III shows the various racial/ethnic state enrollment totals expressed as a percentage of total state enrollment. Table IV shows the various racial/ethnic state enrollment totals expressed as a percentage of the national total enrollment of particular racial/ethnic groups.

Editing and Processing of Data

Numerically additive data items were required to pass a rigid computer check before accretion to the computer data tape. A frequent discrepancy occurred when the sums of individual school data did not equal the district totals reported on the district summary form. All such discrepancies were brought to the attention of the school district or state agency supplying the original data and were subsequently resolved by the originating organization. Some districts operating under Federal Court desegregation order were required to report statistics to the court in a particular court-designated format. These data were transcribed onto OCR forms and processed onto the data tape.

Some schools are listed that offer specialized training such as remedial reading or vocational crafts. These schools are included since they contain full-time teachers but the students are accounted for elsewhere in the district in their regular academic school assignments.[1]

In 1970, Herbert A. Aurbach, Estelle Fuchs, and Gordon Macgregor cooperated in a U.S. Office of Education study entitled, The Status of American Indian Education. In chapter four of that document, which did consider that data with which this report is concerned, the authors state:

> In recent years, more and more of the responsibility for educating Indian children has been taken over by the states and recent BIA policy has been to encourage public school enrollment of Indian children.
> In 1968, the BIA had contracts with fourteen states and school districts in three other states providing assistance under [certain] laws. These states educated 88,000 Indian children (57.4% of all school-age Indians in those same states).[2] One-third were educated at no cost to the Bureau of Indian Affairs.
> The education of Indian children in nine states (California, Idaho, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Oregon, Texas, Washington, and Wisconsin) where there once were federal schools was almost entirely the responsibility of the states. Several other states educate well over one-half of those Indian children that are the responsibility of the BIA.[3]

Since the survey universe of the 1968 Office of Civil Rights research project covered an estimated 90.8% of the nation's public elementary and secondary pupils, and an estimated 96.8% of these schools enrolling 300 or more students, it seems fair to assert that the N of Indian students not covered by the OCR survey, but attending public schools, was small. For readers wishing to study overview data of public, mission, and BIA schools, and especially for those wishing to examine the role of BIA schools, the Aurbach-Fuchs-Macgregor report seems to be a useful reference. The current report provides, however, a more current and detailed profile of Indian students enrolled in public schools throughout the nation, and has the added usefulness of focusing upon those Indian children attending public schools in Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas.[4]

An Overview of the Current Study

For the purposes of this study, it was determined that an "Indian district" would be any district having at least one native American pupil in the public schools. The total Indian student population in United States public schools was estimated at 177,463 in 1968, of which 142,715 were surveyed in the OCR study. The proportion of surveyed students was thus 80.4%.

The OCR survey of metropolitan Indian students did include the New England States, Alaska and Virginia, but for various reasons (see footnote three) we have excluded these states from the current overview. Subtracting the population of Indian students from these states leaves a survey base population of 134,502, and a newly estimated base population of 169,947 for Indian students in the United States.

The total surveyed metropolitan Indian student population for the United States was 45,436. That total is 30.7% of the total survey base population, and 27.1% of the total estimated base population.

The current overview of the OCR survey included 169 SMSAs (1960 definitions). Indian students were enrolled in 91% of these SMSAs.

The average number of Indian students per SMSA covered in this overview was 269.40. SMSAs above this average numbered 35; SMSAs below the average numbered 134. 79.28% of the districts were below the average number of Indian students per SMSA. For the entire breakdown of Indian students in public schools by SMSA, the reader is invited to view the following.

The top ten percent of the SMSAs, according to numbers of Indian students, included a total of 29,732.3 students (or 54.4% of the Indian student total). The top ten percent of the SMSAs featured the following regional distribution: Seven in the southwest; three in the mid-northcentral; three in the mid-southcentral; two in the northwest; and two in the northeast. Of the top 17 SMSAs, 40 percent were located in the southwest. The rest were rather evenly distributed. A breakdown of the SMSA regional distribution within the top 17 SMSAs, together with a percentage distribution of the 29,732 Indian students appears as follows:

Region	Percentage SMSA	Percentage of 29,732
Southwest	40.1	40.7
Mid-North Central	17.0	15.9
Mid-South Central	17.0	24.1
Northwest	11.7	.9
Northeast	11.7	10.5

Maps A and B depict the total surveyed and estimated state public school Indian student population for 1968. Maps C and D depict, respectively, the total surveyed numbers of metropolitan Indian students (1968), and the sectional breakdown of these surveyed students. Map E shows the percentage of metropolitan public school Indian students to the estimated and surveyed state totals.

Map E shows tremendous variation in the percentage of metropolitan Indian students to both estimated and surveyed state Indian public school student totals. From a low of zero percent in both estimated and surveyed categories in Wyoming, the range covers the spectrum to a high of 87.1 and 91.0 percent in the two respective population categories.

In one hundred seven of the one hundred sixty-nine SMSAs (63.3%) at least 50% of the public school districts have enrolled Indian children. Only ten of the SMSAs have an enrollment of Indian students over 1% of the total of all students. These ten SMSAs constitute only 5.9% of all SMSAs of interest to this report. A percentage breakdown of the SMSAs with over 1% Indian student enrollment appears as follows:

Since a narrative summary of the percentage of Indian districts to all districts in sectional SMSAs would be cumbersome, it is useful to list in the following pages section-by-section, and SMSA data that includes not only the proportion of Indian to non-Indian districts, but also the following: total number of Indian students; the approximate average of Indian students to other students in Indian districts for each SMSA; the average number of Indian students in each Indian district for each SMSA; the number of students for each "high" Indian district; the total number of Indian teachers per SMSA; and the number of Indian students for each Indian teacher in every SMSA.

The next section of the report concludes our selective summary of 1968 HEW data concerned with Native American public school students in standard metropolitan statistical areas. A later Training Center report, to be entitled The Education of Urban Indian Children in the United States, takes account of these and many other data in a summarizing fashion.

[4]One of the limitations of the current study is that all SMSAs were included except the New England states, since New England SMSAs are not by county. Alaska has no SMSAs, and so was eliminated; Virginia was also eliminated because of certain difficulties in determining urban location in county settings. The last problem was related to the manner in which data were structured.
